To the Reader

Show kindness to our book, and you shall find
That e'en the very common, prosy parts
Will change, as do the dust motes, when they whirl,
And twinkle iridescent in the sun.

To

DR. SPENCER TROTTER

With words sincere and youthful sympathies ;
With zeal to learn ; he earnestly imparts
The truth to others. Thus he justly wins
The honest love and trust of loyal hearts.

TWO GIFTED WOMEN

IT is my privilege to give a brief, and necessarily inadequate, expression of appreciation of the service of Dean Bond and Professor Cunningham for Swarthmore College.

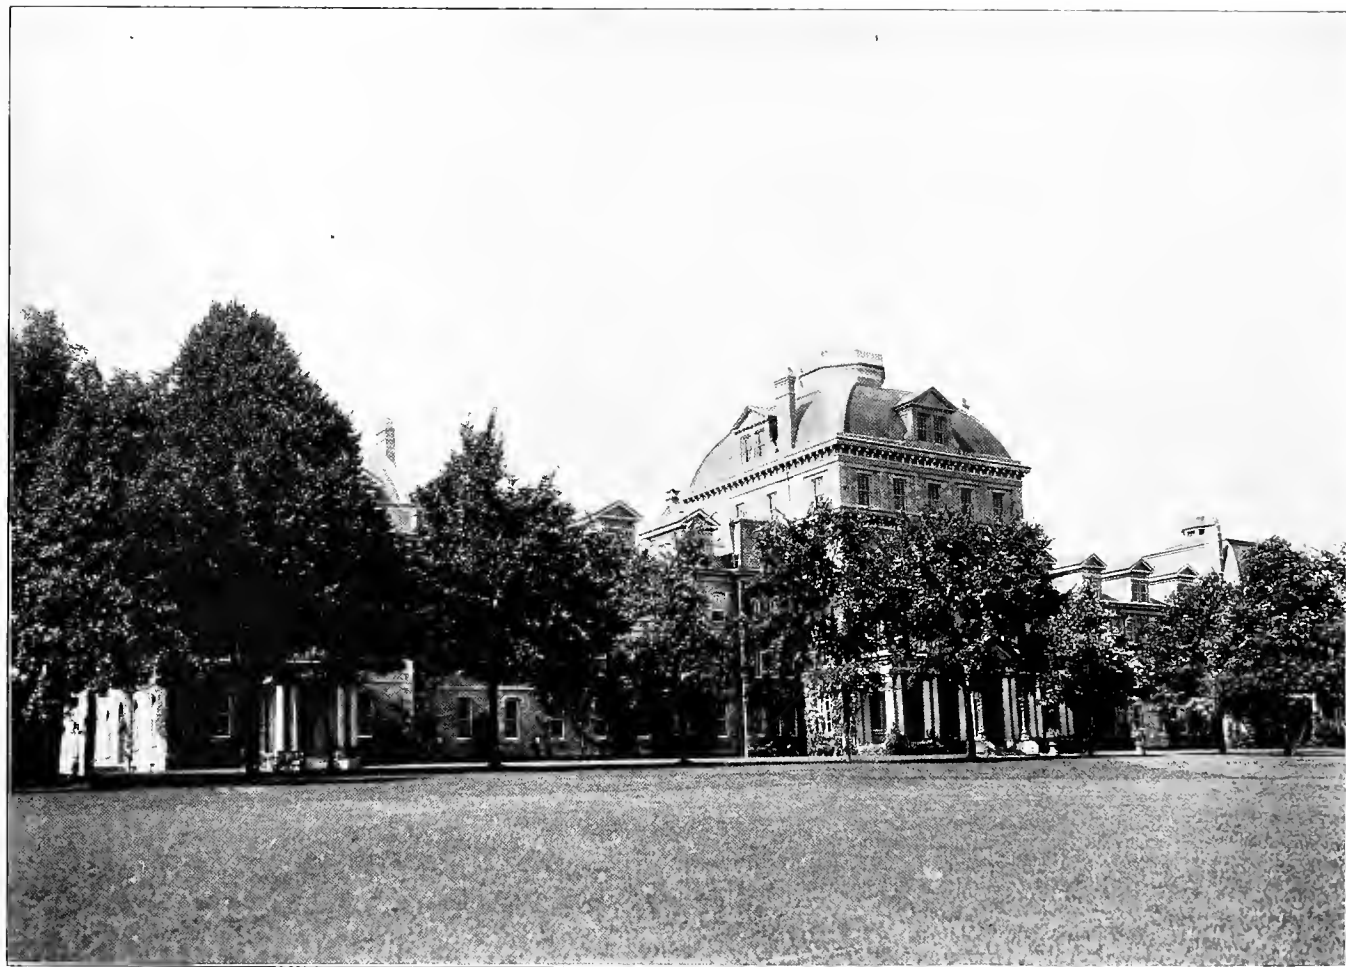

Dean Elizabeth Powell Bond, at the end of this college year will have served the College for twenty years. She has been the "college mother" in all that term implies, and she has made for herself a unique place. The great importance of the delicate and difficult work of Dean Bond at Swarthmore may in part be realized when it is stated that it has taken almost two years to find a suitable successor. To the womanly virtues, so essential for her work, Dean Bond has added unusual literary taste and attainment and a marked aptness in the use of written and spoken language.

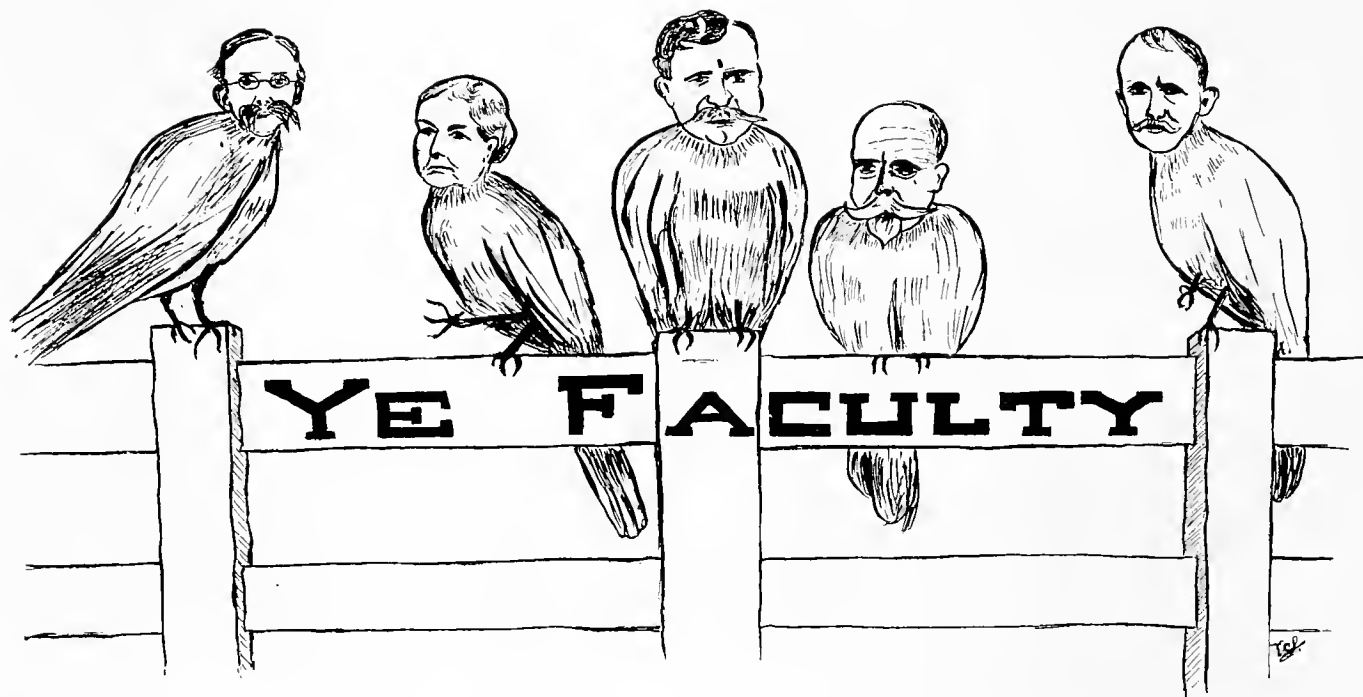

Susan J. Cunningham has the distinction of being the only one in the faculty who has been connected with the College since its beginning in 1869. She is energetic, forceful, and learned in her profession, and a thorough believer in the gospel of work. She has devoted all of her remarkable powers to the College. She has loved Swarthmore more than her own life, of which she has unsparingly given. She has, in season and out of season, been ready not only to serve the College, but to help individual students by giving to them her advice, her time, and in numerous cases her money.

It is eminently fitting that both of these women have been given by the Board of Managers honorary titles in the line of work each has performed.

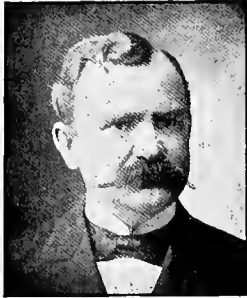

It was not my good fortune to know either of them except by reputation until the fall of 1902. As a geologist does not need to have stood by the sea coast during its formation to know by what agencies and forces it was formed, so the observer of to-day can see the marks for good that these two women have made on Swarthmore children in the years that are gone. They have had a noble and abiding influence on the life of the College. No better evidence of this is needed than the wide expression of regret that the time has come for them to give up their active service in the College. Their names are mentioned with great respect and deep appreciation by Swarthmore's sons and daughters. As I visit our Alumni gatherings from time to time and witness the fine type of graduate which the old College has produced under the influence of Dean Bond and Professor Cunningham and their colleagues, I find one of my strongest hopes and prayers to be that in the changing times and conditions the graduates in the years to come shall in no less degree possess those qualities of mind and heart for which these women have stood in the life of Swarthmore. Those who come after them may well be proud if they are able to achieve for the College in their own way and time what these gifted women have achieved in theirs.

History of 1906

THE historian, however much he may be moved to a fine display of sentiment, must remain impartial. This fact makes our duty doubly thankless and onerous, for we have here to record a class chapter where barren wastes of the insignificant and commonplace are relieved only by melodramatic failure.

From the time that you tried to haze us, up to now—1906—we have pitied you; yes, pitied you with our whole heart, because, in spite of all your little ambitions and jealousies you have succeeded at last in achieving the title “well meaning.”

In scholarship you have played but a poor part, making us all reflect on the good old days, before you, making us hope for the future but despair of the present. Think of it, you have made Swarthmore discard the present tense!

Your hand at the helm steered the Phoenix into a treacherous five-month coma, which was well nigh the death of it.

You did not even fulfil your early promise. You orated, but where were your loyal numbers when the judges made a choice of “whipped cream” instead of “skimmed milk?”

Oh 1906, 1906 try again, while there is yet time, and then we may more confidently wish you good luck and God-speed in the big world where failures are not spectacular.

To 1907

In work and play, in joy and sorrow,
Comrades, staunch and true,
Bravely we look on the morrow,
Whatever storms may brew.
Victories great we win together,
Until our fame swells high,
And the name of 1907
Shall never, never die.

1907, glorious class!
Our loyal thoughts are thine;
Ever in our loving hearts
Thy memory we'll enshrine.
Comrades, all together now,
Earnest voices raise;
1907—hail to thee!
We love thee, thee we praise!

History of 1907

HERE now, our busy pen grows reluctant, loath to force from us—a modest confession—the record of our honors, where so unquestionably they eclipse those of our associates, for it is as if, in a sky of infinite constellations, where hitherto the pale and sickly light of 1906 has reigned supreme; the bigger, brighter sun of 1907 has come, bringing new life and vigor, hurrying its pale heralds off to forgetfulness.

From the very beginning we have been prominent in athletics. We won the 1906-7 wrestling match; we defeated the Pennsylvania Freshmen in a dual track meet. We hold five college records. Henrie is captain of the track team. Not only that, the masculine blue ribbon list, but the girls add a tennis and a hockey championship, as well as two or three medals, to our record.

In literary success, too, we are not to be outdone. We have to our credit the winning of both our class oratorical contests. The victory over 1908, to be sure, brought little unexpected honor, but consider how we out-Rydered Ryder and forever destroyed Miss Hadley's faith in judges!

Your own recollection makes it unnecessary for us to add that 1907 had three places in the extemporaneous speaking contests, how it was the first class to introduce music at the receptions, good behaviour in the dining room and wisdom in class elections.

It is sufficient that we have accomplished all these things. We ask no commendation other than your laudable efforts to do likewise.

History of 1909

AND now we come to our protégés. Young they are and green they have been. Some few still show the most noticeable stains; but what have they not done to humiliate their rivals, the vain glorious and silly sophomores? Do you remember how they wrestled, and took their share of the hazing then turned the tables, both boys and girls? Why, even that slip of a child Ely made Krueger "wrestle with temptation." (It sounds improbable, does it not? But that is the story.)

And two or three of the girls showed their enterprise when, by merely insisting, firmly and to some purpose, they kept Alice Worth on the asphaltum while her train pulled out for town.

It may have been an accident, but the courage was not perforce, when the time for the Freshman class picture was announced in the dining-room and the class carried it through. Everyone laughed, the Sophomores loudest and had reason later to remember the old proverb about the advantages of laughing last, for plucky little 1909 got a fine cut after all.

And so we might go on and multiply instances for your amusement, were there sufficient space, but you must be satisfied to find in this brief enumeration enough proof of their big possibilities.

May they live to realize them all and in their modest way try to fill our place when we are gone!

IF YOU doubt my word when I tell you we had a great football team, go to Annapolis; go to Georgetown; go to Pennsylvania, or Cornell, or Lafayette, or Wesleyan, and ask them what they think of our prowess on the gridiron. We can look back to Captain Crowell's team and pride ourselves on victories over opponents, with years of success and attainment behind them. One defeat only is recorded against us, and we cannot consider ourselves disgraced in bowing to Pennsylvania.

Coach Brooke and Dr. Cummings are the rightful recipients of great credit for the manner in which each accomplished his work. The team gave them hearty coöperation, and as a result slumps were most conspicuous by their absence. Manager Caldwell personally conducted the several long trips, and did everything in his power to make them comfortable and easy for his men. Pleasant relations existed all through, from captain to the substitutes, and nothing was wanting to make the season successful in every way.

With Maxwell on the All-American and Crowell and Barrett on the All-Eastern teams, we close our record of football in 1905.

THE season of 1905-1906 has been the most successful basket ball season since the game was organized at Swarthmore, from all standpoints excepting a financial one. Out of fourteen games, ten were victories, which is a very satisfactory percentage. Another victory this year over Penn was one of the best results of the season, though an even break with Lehigh was not so pleasant.

On the up-state trip the team established a precedent by winning all three games. The game at Gettysburg was won by clean, fast playing, while that at Bloomsburg was a little more in the line of recreation. At Lewisburg, Swarthmore won a hard, fast game from Bucknell University. As this is only the third time Bucknell has been beaten on the home floor in seven years, the game was certainly worth winning.

Great credit is due to the hard work of Capt. Palmer, Dr. Shell, and Coach "Billy" Dunne. Next year four of the Varsity return to college, and with a little luck in the new material, a good team should certainly be organized.

*Scholastic Champion of Philadelphia.

OUR lacrosse team once more came into prominence among the college teams of the country and gained the title of Intercollegiate Champions of the United States for the season of 1905.

The early home games did not prove very difficult, but those with Stevens Institute and Lehigh University drew forth the best efforts of our men, as both teams were unusually strong, and had to be defeated by our superior endurance and team-work.

In Johns Hopkins we expected to meet with the strongest opposition, but by going into the game with a dash we completely outclassed them, and came off victorious with the overwhelming score of 16 to 4. Unfortunately, we closed the season with a defeat at the hands of the University of Toronto, thus losing the Championship of America.

Lacrosse, as a game, is gaining far greater popularity among the alumni and friends of Swarthmore than it ever experienced heretofore, as can be seen by the large attendance at games and the financial support which has been so generously given in the past season.

Coach Davis again rendered his able services, training new men to fill vacancies, so that the team would work more nearly as a unit. It was undoubtedly through this superior team-work and greater physical endurance—thanks to Dr. Cummings—that we were able to go so speedily to the front, and we regret very much not to have the services of these two competent men to care for our team of 1906.

REGRETS were expressed, a year ago, for the lack of interest in track athletics. The student body took this to heart, and though represented by a team small in numbers, that team was not at all lacking in purpose.

By strict training, under the vigilant eye of Dr. Cummings, Swarthmore produced a team of no mean ability. On our own track and field we defeated Lehigh in a dual meet, almost doubling them in score.

At the University of Pennsylvania, on April 29th, we were represented by the fastest relay team which Swarthmore has ever produced. The team, composed of Lamb, Baker, Linton, and Henrie, ran the mile in 3 minutes 30 3/5 seconds, winning their race by a good margin.

In the intercollegiates, Ralph J. Baker brought exceptional honor to Swarthmore by taking third place in the half-mile. By wonderful endurance and head-work he finished only a few yards behind the winner, who ran in record time.

During the season seven college records were broken, these being the two mile, mile and the half mile, by Baker; the shot-put and hammer throw by Maxwell, and the high and low hurdles by Coxe.

The performances of this team will undoubtedly keep our college well up in the athletic world.

Standards Adopted by Swarthmore College Athletic Association

THE white block "S" may be worn on the garnet sweater by members of the College football team who have played in a victorious Haverford game, or in 75 per cent. of the games of a season in which the Haverford game is won.

The white block "S. C." may be worn on the garnet sweater by such members of the scrub football team as the Athletic Council may recommend.

The white block "S." crossed by hockey stick, may be worn on the long-sleeved garnet jersey by members of the College hockey team who have played in 75 per cent. of the games of a season considered successful by the Athletic Council.

The white block "S" may be worn on the long-sleeved garnet jersey by members of the College basket ball team who have played in 75 per cent. of the games for a season considered successful by the Athletic Council.

The garnet block "S" may be worn on the white sweater with garnet trimmings by members of the College lacrosse team who have played in 75 per cent. of the games of a season, in which 75 per cent. of the games have been won.

The garnet block "S" may be worn on the plain white sweater by members of the College relay team, who have run the mile in 3 minutes 36 seconds, by point winners at the annual meet of the I. C. A. A. A. A. and by men who have broken College records.

The white block "ASA" to be worn on the garnet sleeveless jersey, the cap (the "A. A." may be removed when the cap standard has been attained), and the braid, are awarded for performances on track and field.

REORGANIZED AS
THE JOSEPH LEIDY SCIENTIFIC SOCIETY
1895

The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society

THE Scientific Society was organized in March, 1895, and later received the name of The Joseph Leidy Scientific Society of Swarthmore College. Its object is to keep abreast with the discoveries in the scientific world. There are five sciences included in the work of the Association: Astronomy, Biology and Physiography, Chemistry, Engineering, and Physics. The programs of the meetings consist of a report from the instructors in each of the above departments concerning the recent discoveries in their respective sciences. Papers are then read by different members on topics of scientific interest, followed by an open discussion by the Society. The interesting character of these programs is shown by the full attendance at the meetings, from both the College and the borough. The Executive Board consists of a committee of two from each department—one instructor and one student.

The residents of the borough of Swarthmore are eligible to membership, as well as the students and officers of the College. The meetings are held in Science Hall on the second Third-day evening of each month during the college year.

The Young Friends Association

THIS Association is intended primarily for students, instructors, and other members of our College community; but a considerable number of the neighbors are members, and are identified with its work.

The objects of the organization are two-fold: First, the study of the history, literature, and principles of the Society of Friends, and secondly, the consideration of the vital questions of religion and spirituality which we meet in our every-day life.

The regular meetings are held in the College parlor, on the evening of the third First-day of every month during the college year.

Kind Reader, look here, this book is for you
But in reading pray note, "give the devil his due"
Spence first, yes of course, but the staff's guilty too

The Cherry Tree

Latticed against the April sky,
Spread twigs, on which the new buds lie
Just where the blooms will tempt the bees,
And catch the first warm kiss of Spring
As she draws nigh from her long wandering,
Through the far world and meadow leas:
So bud the cherry trees.

Green rustling leaves filled with the morn
Of purling brook, whose minor tone
Runs through all Nature's rhapsodies:
Sway the future tents of birds
Whose notes of mating are the words
Of love told through the centuries:
So leaf the cherry trees.

Like fairy trees of driven snows
Lit by the sunset's blush of rose,
Distilling perfume to the wooing breeze;
Or like the iridescent comb
Of moonlit waves, whose fleecy foam
Lies long the strand of far Hesperides:
So bloom the cherry trees.

To coral pink from softest green,
Then glowing with the ruby's sheen,
Swaying to blue-bird's melodies;
A minuet of upper airs—
The ripening fruit in loving pairs
Swing low in graceful courtesies:
So fruit the cherry trees.

A Trip Thro' Swarthmore

YES SIR, I am the official College Guide. To see the whole place will take several hours, so if you really must catch the 3.51, I'll point out just a few of our notables and the notable places. That young man over there is Peaslee; I mean the one with the flat forehead and the grisly hair. He was president of his Prep. school class, and at present is famous as a debater. That tall man in the shadow of the arch is Cottrell, fusser and politician. Just beyond where he stands is the Book Room where Miss Lukens sticks us Wall Street panic prices at Supe's order. The third door to the right opens directly to a Mathematical Purgatory, where Freshmen and others are purged of bad Prep. methods.

"Returning on our right you may see, sir, a door marked 'Phoenix.' Tread softly and take off your hat. The old codger is dead and his son, 'The Swarthmorean,' is asleep in the old worm-eaten chair. This long leather settee is the "Pet." No Fresh may rest thereon, and others only by priority of possession. The sore-heads like to wait here and make remarks about the fussers as they leave Social Hour.

"Ah! that gentleman coming there is Dr. Crawford, who uses liberal doses of red ink, taken internally. Rather a unique medicine, don't you know? He gives good meals in the Nursery and bad shines in his shop on Sunday mornings.

"This is the dining room, where some 300 students are fed three times a day. The most prominent object, as you see, is the Michael Angelo 'Moses' presented by the class of 1907, and discreetly selected by Miss North and others. 1906 usually make slurring remarks concerning this, but the truth is that they themselves never earned money enough to buy any sort of a picture for the College.

"Here is the postoffice, used for fussing—morning, noon and evening. The lady behind the bars is Jane Harper, who tries for two AAs in all subjects each semester.

"These stairs are now common property for young men and women. This hall is inhabited by several ladies who don't like to study and don't mind the noise above them. Miss Hood lives just here and, if you were a student, you could appreciate an invitation to one of her dainty 9 p. m. suppers.

"This, gentlemen, is our Collection Hall, where we have singing on Sunday nights and where we have our lectures. Their Royal Highness, the Faculty, are semi-commonly seen here for collection. As you see, its decorations are antique, but many of our visitors delight in its architectural beauty. That expressive picture to the right was painted by the famous Dadmun. The piano cost a fortune, and the gallery when comfortably filled, registers 90 degrees in the shade.

"The Library, where you now are, is Co-Ed Garden of Eden. This imposing case of books belongs to the Department of Law. Their coating of dust is to be regretted, but then so few dare transgress the law.

"That youth reading the newspaper over there is McDonough, member of 'Exec' football team, etc., who is probably waiting for Bentley, a variety of Swarthmore breeze.

"Now we are on the third floor. This, on the right, is the Alumni Room, where Doctor Holmes twists up facts and calls the "Simple Studes" by their first names. The ventilator is a relic of the old P. O., on which Supe has a patent. The room across the hall belongs to Dr. Hull, and occasionally to Prof. Edmunds, of the Philadelphia City Party Bar. The chief duty of all the students of history is the cutting of initials on the seats and an occasional nap.

"You will pardon me, I trust, if I hurry you through the Museum, where I am afraid we might disturb a platonic friendship. These narrow stairs lead to the Dome. Look out for your head, that's it.

"From the flag-pole here we float a big American flag on football days, and Willie Crowell once ascended to its top to view the dog-star.

"Miss Cunningham lives in the picturesque old place by the College gate. The nearer stone structure is the girl's "James" when they have hen dances. On the opposite side, to the west, that is, we see the boys' Gym, where no one goes, and Wharton Hall, where we do the three S's—smoke, sleep, study.

"On the left of the asphaltum you see the cherry tree, and the little squat bushes, where the girls loaf and the fellows—

"By gum, there comes your train at Wawa. Come, we must hurry."

Nursery Poems

Little Son Hornor
Sat in a corner
And Eddie sat near by,
They spoke not a word,
Neither one of them stirred.—
You've seen them and so have I.

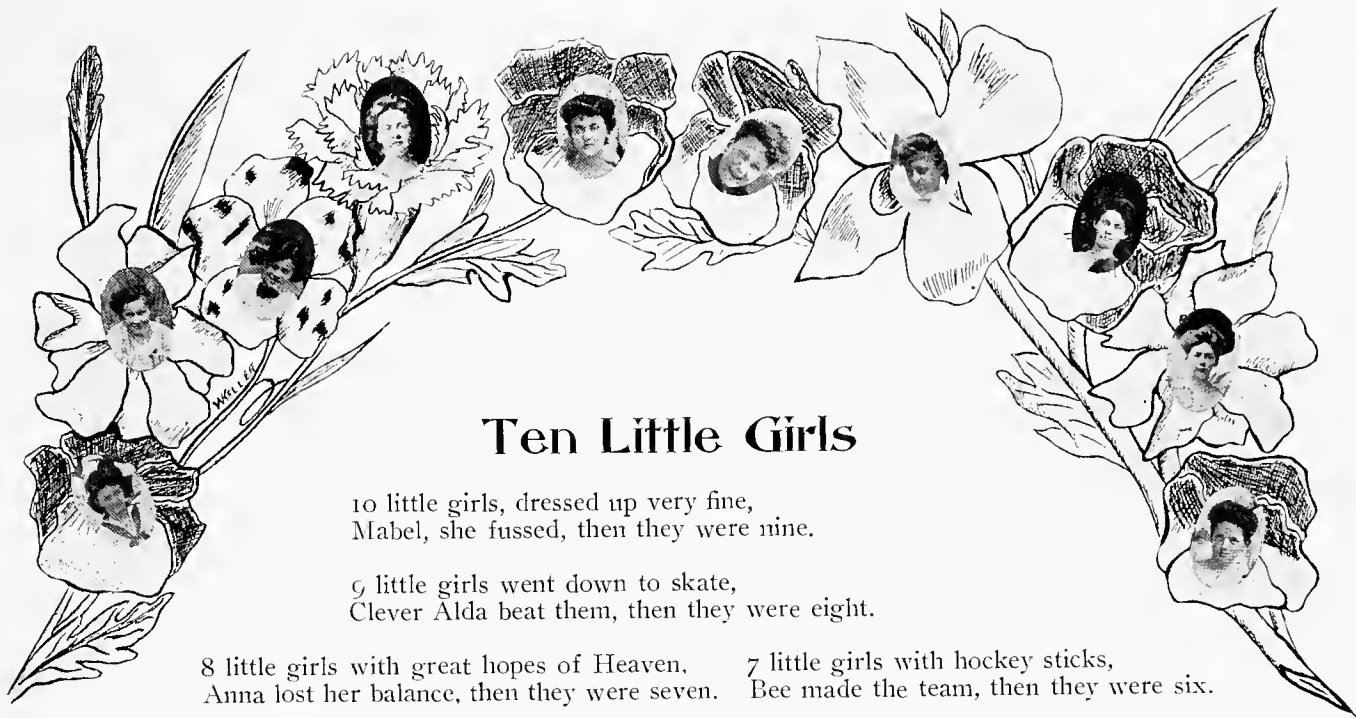

More hours denied her
To the office she lied her,
And thought she could run a good bluff;
But he turned to the senior,
Said he, "It's a dream, yer,
Ain't got near credits enough."

Sing a song of oranges,
A box of grapefruit too,
Four and twenty hungry boys
Try to get a few.
When the box was opened
Now wasn't that a sting,
For all the boys went hungry
And the fruit went to East wing.

Some damsels brave
A dinner gave,
And thought they'd eats to spare,
But ere they looked
Their eats were hooked
And no ice cream was there.
Sing a song of cases
And crushes at Swarthmore,
Of Reginald and all the girls
Of David and Lenore!

WHO WENT NIGHT-WALKING?

Who went night-walking?
"I," said the culprit,
"I couldn't help it,
I went night-walking!"
Who saw them go?
"I," said Dick Yates,
"I heard their dates,
I saw them go!"
Who found them out?
"I," said exec,
"With my rubber neck
I found them out!"
What will be done to her?
Nothing to fear;
She'll drop a tear,
But naught will be done to her.
Who'll go to-morrow night?
"I," said the same one,
"I was'n't badly stung,
I'll go to-morrow night!"

Ten Little Girls

10 little girls, dressed up very fine,
Mabel, she fussed, then they were nine.

9 little girls went down to skate,
Clever Alda beat them, then they were eight.

8 little girls with great hopes of Heaven,
Anna lost her balance, then they were seven.

6 little girls, very much alive,
Madeline danced in the parlor, then they were five.

4 little girls, so glad to be free,
Alice led the Fresh astray, then they were three.

2 little girls, fussing in the sun,
They put Mary on "exec" then they were one.

No little girls, how sad would be the knowledge,
If none of these dainty lasses came back to college.

7 little girls with hockey sticks,
Bee made the team, then they were six.

5 little girls, yelling Swarthmore,
Mildred offended Professor C, then they were four.

3 little girls, with nothing to do,
Katherine died of ennui, then they were two.

1 little girl, it wasn't any fun,
Died writing her class poem, then they were none.

An Imaginary Conversation

"By the volts of Jupiter! I am nauseated with these so-called amusements, this pitting of Spartan brutes against beasts of Numidia. Is it fit sport for a Caesar? Has the broad empire of Rome nothing better to offer its Emperor? What is there to tempt the eyes and occupy the minds of the citizens for the coming season?"

"Your Majesty's pardon, five hundred Christians were thrown to the lions, but yesterday—and—"

"Tut-tut! The small pleasure of such spectacles is outweighed by the desire of greater Rufinus. Even the perfume of sacrificial fires, though they light the charms of Christian maidens, has become stench in my nostrils. I tell you, I am tired of such shows!"

"Your Majesty knows that the whole world has been scoured for the fiercest men and beasts; the ingenuity of your generals and their slaves has been taxed to the utmost to secure and invent something to call the smile back to your imperial face; and to-day you are to witness for the first time a conflict before which gladitorial combats pale into nothingness."

"How, now? Keep me not in suspense, or by the beard of Saturn it will go not well with you!"

"I crave pardon, your Majesty. I delay only that I lack name for the affair. But it is strange, forsooth, and if the sight of such things is displeasing to your Majesty, the Praetor shall stop the show."

"Stop it! Who commands here but Caesar? Let him who dares stop it! Let the sport begin, and if there be blood enough it may wash away this indisposition and clear my brain."

"The slaves, your Majesty, are now preparing the gridiron."

"Gridiron? Did I not say that I was tired of the burning?"

"Your Majesty misunderstands the marking; the bounds of the arena are so called where the game is played. There will be roasting of another kind to-day. Ah! they come, the combatants, your Majesty, through the capitol gate."

"Ah well! be it so. But what barbarians have we yonder? I know them not; are they from Gaul, farther Britain or beyond Danube?"

"Neither, your Majesty; they are from Delaware—a new discovered land, the Land of Graft; they came to adorn the triumph of Theodorus, and are picked men."

"They look not picked about the head. But what manner of armor have they on? And what weapons do they use?"

"Does your Majesty behold the sphere-elongated which they are tossing? That is a most fatal weapon, beyond the short sword the spear or the net."

"It looks not so. But what are they doing now, Rufinus? Methinks they prepare to eat each other. Is it not so?"

"It doth look so, indeed, your Majesty; but peradventure we shall later see their intent. Ah! one is covetous; he hath seized the sphere and fled—but they are in pursuit—they most surely will overtake him."

"I lay as wager the revenue of a Satrapy of Syria that the tow-headed barbarian does not catch him."

"Taken, your Majesty, against six Idumean stallions and a golden chariot."

"Done, by Castor and Pollux! Ah, look! He is down—the whole mob is on him; he deserves death for a coward in running away, but his death will stop the sport too quickly. Do they kill him without a chance? Ho, slaves, stop the massacre!"

"Your Majesty is perturbed without reason. It is the way of the game. There is but one killed. One has lost an eye; one has broken a limb, and one lies senseless. They have substitutes for the disabled."

"Substitutes! Game! One slave stamped to death by twenty others! Am I to sit here and in the name of Sport, behold such cowardly exhibition? I who have gazed unflinchingly on the gladitorial combats of the Amphitheatre? I who have seen the Christians given to the beasts and sacrificed to the Gods? By the shade of Mars, this doth surpass all understanding. Give over the spectacle and send the barbarians to the galleys. Save this Rome."

"This is not Rome, your Majesty. Rome has passed. This is America! Our parole from Hades is almost ended. Your Majesty, we must away."

"America? I see its finish if such are the entertainments of the land. Let us go, Rufinus; they play a square deal where we abide."

PARTIAL ECLIPSE AS OBSERVED
BY PROF. S.J. CUNNINGHAM

WHY THEY CAME TO COLLEGE.

Being the result of several private inquiries.

Signed statements may be seen on application.

MARY B. CRANSTON—to keep the college temperature lower.

MAX MILLER—it needed a celebrity.

JOHN L. LOWES—it seemed to need a little culture, as it were.

ALICE TIMMONS—I wished to learn to keep house.

CHARLES P. BARRETT—?

LAWRENCE WATTERS—executive ability had all died out; I came to run things. Ahem!

ELSIE LOVE—growing so fast—try starvation.

EDGAR HIREs—to dance and run the engine.

W. GARDINER—it makes a good hotel.

ED. P. PALMER—the gay life of West Chester was not congenial to a holy palmer.

DICK YATES—Lord knows.

DAVID ROWLANDS—to sing, to play foot ball, to fuss.

MARY VERLENDEN—its a weighty disclosure.

LOUISE A. PFOUTS—

HELEN DILLISTIN—"My sister came—imitation is highly developed."

WILLIAM DIEBOLD—DEBOLD—to buy and sell.

IN ECONOMICS I. A Dissertation on Luxury:

"Seeing other people live so well makes poor people wish to do the same, and leads them to robbery, murder, and marrying for money."

AN OWLING SUCCESS.

SCENE.—Fourth Floor, Transverse, East Wing.

E. B. had history to study.

This was not strange at all;

But then out on the fire-escape

An owl began to call.

Her eyes did stare; her book she dropped;

Her heart did palpitate.

She said she "really didn't like

To sit alone so late."

She ran her many friends to call,

With towel wrapped round her head,

To-whit! To-whoo-o-o! the weird sound came.

And this is what they said:

"It certainly's the strangest sound!

So quavering—and weird!"

Then turning on E. B. their backs,

They winked and gently leered.

But from the kindness of their hearts,

With hockey-sticks they poke

The human owl well hidden there;

With laughter wild they choke.

They bring her in—the human owl,

No more she'll weirdly croak;

But all their efforts wasted are,—

E. B. can't see the joke.

ALEXANDER.

Listen, Alexander, still a grudge we carry,
Think about that awful week last January;
Can that week forgotten be, when our grades you see?
Think about our cramming all the long nights through,
Think about the extra work we've had to do.
If it comes again this spring, the day you'll rue,
And if we're stung again just rests with you!

Don't you see the toil and trouble you've been makin',
Alexander, O Alexander?

Don't you see the extra hours we've been takin',
Alexander, O Alexander?

Listen, while we sing to you our mournful ditty,
Think about our woes and have a little pity,
Alexander, promise! won't you make a schedule this spring?

MISS DADMUN:

"What event marks 1100 B. C.?"

CAROLINE WASHBURN:

"The Greeks were conquered by the Christians."

DR. LOWES in Composition III.

"What is written here is distinctly shady."

IF

If Ferris were a Freshman,
And Yates a Ph. D.,
If Appsie gave us lessons
In Trigonometry,
If Alleman presided
In social hour each night,
Wouldn't poor old Swarthmore
Be in a sorry plight?

If Jimmie used tobacco,
And Lizzie flunked each day,
If Dot were sans her Mabel
To imitate alway,
If Seniors had an agony
On every Thursday night,
Wouldn't poor old Swarthmore
Be in a sorry plight?

Krider finds a small envelope in his box, looks at the post mark, and booms: "Great balls of fire, Manayunk!" and then is fussed to find Alda at his side.

GATHERED SEEDS.

'Tis better to have used the other fellow's soap than to have used no soap at all.

Elsie Love, Bertha Jannev, Fred Ely—"Brevity is the soul of it."

Will the new Dean give us roses for the first course at breakfast?

The little rhyme, "When the Devil was sick, the Devil an angel would be," etc., might be applied to Mac-Donough on the Exec.

An awful temptation—Second West.

If the first, second and third floors are West, First, Second and Third; what was Benjamin West?

JACK ROBB:—"When you're in love, you either feel like Napoleon in Paris or Napoleon in St. Helena."

When in doubt, refuse the hash.

Mourning need not be worn by college widows.

A PLEASANT DREAM OF PRESIDENT SWAIN.
A MEETING OF THE BOYS' COMMITTEE IN 1908.

(SCENE:—William D. Himes' room in Wharton Hall. The committee consisting of W. D. Himes, President; J. C. Tanger, Secretary; R. G. DeBow, A. M. Eastburn and W. P. Wilbur are sitting solemnly around table.)

PRESIDENT HIMES:—"Gentlemen, we have considered these matters long enough. We know the guilt of the culprits; let us put into execution the sentences we have decided upon. Mr. Tanger, will you summon Mr. Krueger."

(Mr. Krueger is admitted.)

HIMES:—"Mr. Krueger, we have condemning evidence that you are responsible for cracker crumbs found in the hall near the dining-room. Have you anything to say for yourself?"

MR. KRUEGER:—"I thought before I judged it was too late and carried most of the crumbs to the door, besides I was hungry and didn't think."

HIMES:—"That is no excuse, Mr. Krueger. The committee deem it advisable in the future that you take all you have to eat between meals to the basement where the clutter can be readily cleaned up."

(Exit Mr. Krueger.)

HIMES:—"Gentlemen, the next case must be dealt with more severely. Mr. Tanger, bring in Mr. Ely."

(Mr. Ely admitted.)

HIMES:—"Mr. Ely you are accused of coeducation which was not restricted to social hour. Have you anything to offer?"

MR. ELY (defiantly):—"I-I-I didn't."

HIMES:—"It is useless to deny the fact, Mr. Ely; we have circumstantial evidence."

MR. ELY (weakening):—"Well, the woman, she tempted me."

MR. EASTBURN:—"Mr. President, let me suggest that Mr. Ely be dealt with to the full extent of the law, as it is to our interest to co-operate fully with the Dean and the Young Women's Student Government."

HIMES:—"Mr. Ely, you are given two weeks probation, as this is your first offense."

(Mr. Ely leaves.)

MR. HIMES:—"Let us end this business and send for Mr. Wister."

(After half an hour, during which the committee became restless, Wister is admitted by Tanger.)

MR. TANGER (aside to Himes):—"Himes, I had to hunt for this man all over college; found him out in the wood learning 'Marmion' for public speaking class."

Himes:—"Mr. Wister, the committee, after the most careful consideration, have deemed it advisable for you to sever your connection with this institution. Two days ago while waiting for the 12.18 train for Philadelphia, you were seen smoking on the station platform. Do you deny this?"

Wister (meekly):—"I can't say that I do, Mr. Himes."

HIMES:—"But this is not all. You were heard to say three times in a loud and undignified tone, while in the second alcove, 'Dearie me,' because no one answered your repeated whistles."

Tanger:—"I hope Mr. Wister, that this will be a lesson you will not forget. Henceforward shun the filthy weed and forego the use of naughty language."

Wister (aside, as he leaves room):—"Would that I had followed the dictates of my own heart and taken Dorothy's counsel."

A noise as of girls giggling and whispering in the hall.

EDMONDS:—"Rowlands, will you go out and quell the noise?"

(Rowlands goes out and does not return.)

EDMONDS:—"Holme, if I sent you out, do you think you'd be liable to return?"

HOLME:—"I, I'd t-try!"

C. (in Philosophy):—"But suppose your conscience doesn't tell you that a thing's wrong on some day?"

DR. HOLMES:—"There's such a thing as moral idiocy, thee knows, as well as intellectual idiocy."

EDITH MATHER (translating):

"He murmured fruitful swear-words."

HOLME:—"I'm afraid I'm a bit rusty on that, Professor."

EDMONDS:—"You never get rusty on what you haven't acquired. It isn't rust; it's a vacuum."

DUCKIE:—"Mabel, what does thee mean by hierarchy of spirits?"

YATES:

"Can't tell exactly. But I know it's pretty hot down there."

WHEREFORE?

Time for collection! One last hasty look
The worried student casts upon her book,
And heavy-hearted passes by the nook
Where Jane does read a novel.

At noon into the reading-room we trip,—
For tiresome facts will from our memories slip,
But even here at leisure Jane does sip
The pleasures of a novel.

Midnight! The weary students slowly creep
Past rooms where others, weary, pine for sleep,
But Jane her usual careful watch does keep
And reads another novel.

Oh Jane! we've often wondered how it—am,
When all of us are forced to sit and cram,
You've time to pass the very worst exam,
And yet read many a novel.

DR. HOLMES:—"Who were the prophets of the exile, Oscar?"

OSCAR:—"Tzsh—Schtz—er. I can't exactly pronounce it, Professor."

DR. HOLMES:—"Thee might pronounce it Isaiah or Ezekiel."

What a Relief it Would Be—

If Jessie's pink tie should chance to wear out,
If Ash developed naughtier ways,
If Satty succeeded in getting quite stout,
If Marion Comly a rumpus would raise,
If Percy R. Roberts ran out of hot air,
If Helen B. Dillistin did her own work,
If Marion Hoopes amputated his hair,
If Bertha Peirce some of her duties would shirk,
If Leinaw would look you right straight in the eye,
If McDowell forgot his girlhood days,
If Margaret Painter a fresh joke let fly,
If Baker would cease at the ladies to gaze,
If Diebold could find some one willing to fuss,
What a blessed relief it would then be for us!

DR. BROOKS:—"Miss Dickinson, can you give me any reasons against the Cigarette Law in Indiana?"

(Miss Dickinson hesitates.)

DR. B.:—"Oh, come, every cigarette smoker has a thousand reasons—oh—really, I beg your pardon, Miss Dickinson."

JIMMY RICHARDSON (translating):—"Do duty to your King, his safety to your ruin."

MISS BRONK:—"Why, you sound as if you were insane."

Song of the Classes

1909

Oh Giggely-Goo-Goo, Giggely-Geezer,
Goo-Goo, Lambie Mine;
Tootsy-wootsy—Mamma's Baby,
Pity-itty—1909.

1908

With hazing amazing
And rough-house araising,
A l orecedent mocking
The facutly shocking,
Oh, gay is the Sophomore:
Wild is he!

From college suspended,
His boldness a l ended;
With noise ess step cre.ping,
His naughtiness s eeping
Subdued is thæ Sophomore:
Mild is he.

1907

With stately step the Junior passes by;
An upper classman now, his dignity appals;
Unwonted cares do wrinkle up his brow,
And pleasure's name a look of scorn forth calls,
Yet oft, when striving hard for men sedate,
With wistful look he views the harmless pleasure;
A Sophomore—it's joys he would have felt;
A Junior now—for fun he has no liesure.

1906

But who is this with shoulders bent, with goggles on his nose,
With sleepy eyes, and book in hand, and solemn studious pose?
Why! that's a Senior—tired to death! Just hear his dreadful cough?
He has to study now, you see—conditions to work off.
For wild was he—a lawless youth—by Prexy much berated,
But every effort now is turn to get him graduated.

ALICE MALONE

(With apologies to Charles Lever.)
Did you hear of sweet Alice Malone,

Ohone!
Who lived in Swarthmore all alone?
Alone!

Oh she melted the hearts,
Of the boys in these parts,
So lovely was Alice Malone,
Ohone!
So lovely was Alice Malone.

But so modest was Alice Malone,
Ohone!
 That no one could call her his own,
Alone!

Let them ogle and sigh,
She would shyly slip by,
So bashful was Alice Malone,
Ohone!
So bashful was Alice Malone.

Till one Robert Farley from here,
So queer,
In her radiant presence came near,
Without fear :

Laid siege to the heart
That forgot all its art.
"O," says he, "you're my Alice Malone,
Malone!"
"O," says he, "you're my Alice Malone."

MISS BRONK:—"Où est-ce que vous avez gagné votre 'S' "

LENORE (blushing furiously) :—"Il n'est pas ici."

DR. BROOKS:
 "Suppose you entered a pie-eating contest, Mr. Williams, what would your gratifications be like?"

WILLIAMS:
"I never eat pie."

DR. HOLMES:—"Now, Emilie, what can thee say as to the character of Astarte?"

EMILY (doubtfully) :—"Why, she wore a white dress."

DR. HOLMES:—"Yes, I'll admit I have a real aversion to sitting with my back to an open door."

HARVEY:—"I've noticed that symptom in lots of animals, Doctor."

MISS BRONK:—"O, watchman; why don't you wear carpet slippers—all the watchmen in all the big colleges and universities of the United States wear carpet slippers!"

A youth for another mistook
Miss Bronk all alone in a nook.
 "Fair Alice," said he,
 "Wilt skate now with me?"
She squelched him at once with a look.

To hear the Girls' Glee Club rehearse,
You would say that it couldn't be worse.

In a few years or so,
If they don't get too slow,
We hope we can say the reverse.

SATTV:—"He is more than six feet high,
And fortunate and wise;
He has a voice of melody,
And beautiful black eyes."

Blessings on thee, little Frank,
Barefaced boy, of maiden rank;
With thy turned up pantaloons,
Dimples deep, like crescent moons,
With thy red cheek—redder still,
Kissed by Colgate's newest frill;
With the powder on thy face,
Rubbed in in many a place.
From my heart I call thee coy,
Thou art such a pretty boy.

Act II
Scene II

Time: Midnight
Place: From Margery's Window

Margery. Oh Charles, my Charles! Wherever art thou, Charles?

Come seize the Kettle and untie the strings.

Or if thou wilt not, lift the contents out

And gorge thyself upon them

Charles (Surprising at the jump)

I'll take her at thy word, - and take the Kettle too (approaches)

Margery. Oh Charles, thou art thyself, thy hungry self?

What do I give thee? Neither hash
nor soup.

Nor beefsteak tough, nor any other thing

Thou'rt wont to feed upon I have a Kettle -

What's in the Kettle? That which we call fudge.

In any other dish 'twould taste
as sweet

Charles, I do pray thee, take the Kettle off.

And of that fudge that I have made for thee,

Take all thyself

Charles

I take thee at thy word

Frenzied Finance

A tragedy in four acts.

ACT I.

Leary's Book Store.

Enter W. D. Himes with suit case, from which he takes countless books.

HIMES—"How much can you give me on these, please?"

MR. LEARY—"Ten dollars."

Exit Himes with money and smiles.

ACT II.

Grace Taylor's residence, Swarthmore.

HIMES—"Grace wilt go to theater with me?"

GRACE—"You bet I will, Billy."

ACT III.

Diebold's room. Diebold in great anger. Himes a little confused but happy with recollections.

DIEBOLD—"Himes, where are the books which I left in your room? I want my books."

HIMES—"Go to Leary's; but no, I will get you new books from Miss Lukens."

ACT IV.

New Oxford. Mr. W. A. Himes is discovered looking over a bill.

MR. HIMES—"My son William is a student. He has just purchased $20 worth of books."

The "West House."

Dwelling quaint, with arching gambrel,

Nestling 'mid the sheltering trees

Where the modest violets cluster,

Share with us thy memories.

Whisper low of Quaker maidens,

Shy, demure, of gentle face;

Tell us of colonial damsels

Tripping by with dainty grace.

Tune thy voice to harsher measure,

Speak to us of war and strife,

Grief and sorrow, love of freedom

Stronger far than love of life.

Tell us of the noble Artist

Struggling upward on to fame,—

May thy walls his memory foster,

Every stone give back his name!

Thus we speak and listen, longing

Tales of bygone days to hear;

But the drowsy walls re-echo

Naught but Leon's laughter clear,

While the sun with gentle touches

Turns his silken locks to gold,

And the quaint old house is sleeping,

Sleeping with its tales untold.

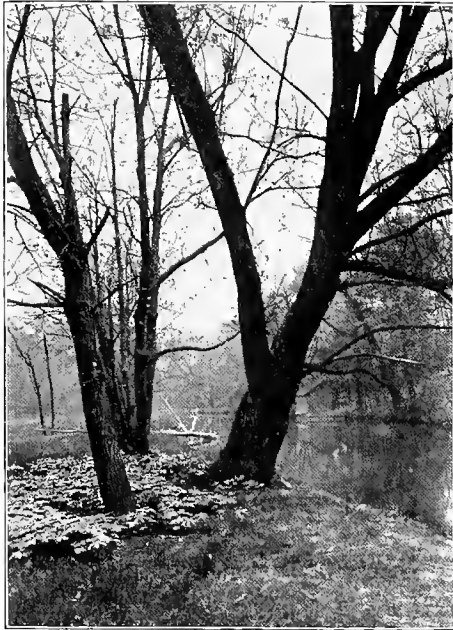

E.—"Well, doesn't our author say something different?"

DR. HOLMES—"In so far as our author says the same thing as I do, he is right!"

EUREKA!

We've learned about that vacant seat,
That troubled us on Thursday eve,
When knotty law our wisdom tried,
And we were not allowed to leave.

Most of us come to Swarthmore here,
To gain our varied knowledge;
But Ed. and Hornor go to town
To see "Just out of College."

------------	---	--

It was a gay, young Freshman, in Parrish lived up there,
His room was off the alcove, his thought was on the stair:
The wife of Prexy Swain it was came wandering down the hall.
Her haste was very great indeed, her progress rather small.

Then up arose the Freshman, no time for thought took he:
"I guess I'll raise a rough-house, as rough as house can be.
I read it on the bulletin-board that for to raise some dough,
The 1906 co-eds to-night will through an agony go."

And he has seized the washstand now, and crossed the squeaky floor,
And he has o'er the railing hung, as he has done before,
While Prexy's wife thinks of the dough, and hopes they'll earn it sure,
He has not heard the lady's step, and drops the furniture.

Out spoke the noble President: "O what is that, my friends?"
" 'Tis nothing but the way, sir, in which the agony ends."

But Prexy Swain is wise, alas! sends Pike to quell the riot,

And Student Gov. Exec. will sit on him who dared to try it.

Little Editorials

The very up-to-date committee, who are in charge of the Young Men's Student Government Association, have instituted a "Lost and Found" case, similar to that one which the Dean has provided for the girls, in her hall. Up to this time the collection has constantly increased, owing to the extreme modesty of the young men who hesitate to claim their own. Step up, boys! Pike, that craw fish skeleton is yours, it's the one that kept you in the laboratory seven straight hours. Himes, that's the book Leary returned. Kreuger, that bunch of proxies, you bought and paid for. McDowell, claim that razor.

The subject of a Shakespeare evening has been flatly turned down. Senior dignity haughtily refuses to perform for the delight and edification of the vulgar. Do they scorn to waste their talents on Shakespeare? If so, let more of them take Dr. Lowes courses and learn of the depth and wealth of our friend Bill. Do they want to do something very original? If so, why are we not astonished at some brilliant production? Is it to be comic opera, or a miracle play, or a "Man and Superman"? If so, how would Marjory Beddoes do for, well, say,—in the "Wizard of Oz"? Or Bill De Cou as the star in "Man and Superman"? But to get back to Shakespeare, how about Walt Baker and E. Johnson in "Romeo and Juliet"? If it is hard to make up your mind concerning the cast, take a few hints: White as Sir John; Jessie as Thisbe; Dick Thatcher as a Clown; Malvolio for Palmer; Gertrude Adams as the Shrew; Henry Crawford as Othello; and, of course; Bill Diebold as Shylock.

Alumni Day at Commencement is an innovation for which we are very thankful, but we appeal to the class to give us still more. It is not greed, merely a desire to see our worthy contemporaries of 1906 do themselves justice. Why not introduce a valedictory into the commencement programme? Everyone is glad to hear Joseph Wharton and Prexie, but our departing friends will be nearer to our hearts. They are going out from us—let them say good-bye. Think what you are leaving! Elect Cottrell your valedictorian—his farewell to Louise would be impressive and solemn. Or what could be more tender than Mabel Vernon's parting from Nellie Davidson? or appropriate than to have Walter Baker take leave of all his loves, with, "I go to join Lady Betty in her tour thro' the Ladies' Home Journal"? Our last plea—do not disappoint us.

Letters

Victim of Throat Trouble

Sir: For some time past I have been troubled by a very acute and embarrassing affection of the throat and nose. It is the one barrier to my social success. Is there no way to overcome it?—Kreuger, '08.

By the exercise of great care and the constant application of some healing medicine, such as "Mentholum," your trouble, in time, may be outgrown; it is too much to expect instant recovery.

Prematurely Bald

Sir: Although I am young and considered very handsome, I am, at present, greatly concerned about my hair, which is rapidly wearing away. The idea of a scratch is very distasteful to me; and yet as it is, I dare not vigorously use a brush. Cannot you aid me in my distress?—Henrie.

Your trouble is probably due to brain-fag. Exert yourself as little as possible, mentally, and take out-of-door exercise.

Cigarette Smoking

Sir: I am a red-haired boy of sixteen years of age, and speak French fluently. For about eight years I have been smoking cigarettes and find that it is stunting my growth and otherwise impairing my health. Kindly advise some way that will stop the habit, as I find it very hard.—Ely, '09.

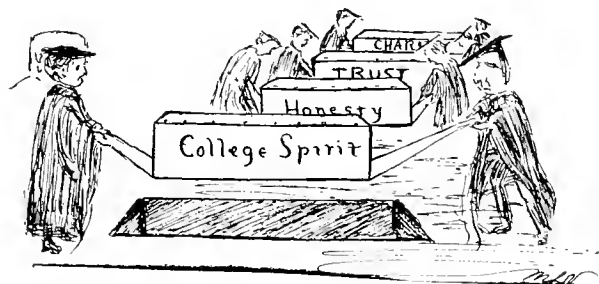

Try to cut down your smoking gradually; or, better still, smoke once in Parrish Hall while a member of the boys' committee is in evidence.

Clothes at a Wedding

Sir: I am short and stout; but particular about my clothes. Circumstances over which I have no control compel me to usher at a very fashionable wedding and have my photograph taken immediately afterward. Shall I or shall I not wear a frock coat and high silk hat.—F. Boyd, '08.

Do so by all means. Your friends will make allowances and your enemies would consider your appearance ridiculous in any event.

Class Politics

Order your Ascension Robe when—

Diebold goes into social hour again.

Norman Ash uses "language."

Jessie Grim exaggerates.

Freddy Ely, Willie Bradley, Gracie Taylor, Mary

Taylor, Lee Coble grow up.

Jane Harper flunks.

Nellie Davidson differs with Mabel Vernon.

Edith Bunting sees a joke.

George Blyth stops talking.

Helen Baker gets noisy.

Max Miller hastens.

Poor Polly to Mary Verlenden went,

Her eyes running over with tears:

"I've got to tell someone at last," she said.

"Three days I have trembled with fears.

For M. Elizabeth flunked me, alas!

And at my best work she sneers;

I'll have to leave college, I'm afraid,

Since with gym I am so in arrears."

A fresh little Freshman, with a Freshman's fresh way,
Freshly spoke to a Senior one fresh autumn day;
That night the fresh waters of our fresh little crum
Gently bathed the sad form of that fresh little one.

LOUISE (as she takes the crust from Ed.'s pudding in passing it) :—"Ed. doesn't eat the crust."

ED. (sadly) :—"No, I see I don't."

If you've feelings—go on and confess 'em,
As Charles does to Margie address 'em.
Doc Trotter's all right;
He is filled with delight,
And chortles and chuckles, "God bless 'em."

If this book is not quite to your liking
Why don't you do something striking?
If us you believe,
The sole help we receive,
Is from Margery—always a-Piking.

If you go walking in the rain,
You'll certainly get wet.
If you see Ella, take my word!
You'll see her shadow, "Pet."

LOGICAL CONCLUSION.
Two faces with but a single expression,
Two girls that giggle as one.

PROF. HAYES:—"I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I know not where.'
Now where did the arrow fall, Miss Shoemaker?"
LUCRETIA (slightly mixed):—"In the heart of a friend."

"Though Swarthmore meals are somewhat meagre,
And we are always starving; still
We need not worry now for Polly,
For once a week she gets her Phil.

When winter-bound the college stood,
And all the days were gray and drear,
We toiled our Halcyon to make,
In doubt and fear.

But now that brighter days are come,
We for your kindly judgment sue,
In hope and trust, this book of ours
We leave with you.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE is located on high ground about twelve miles southwest of Philadelphia. The College buildings command a fine outlook across the fields of Delaware County to the Delaware River and the New Jersey slopes. The campus consists of 200 acres of rolling and partly wooded land, bordering on Crum Creek. All who visit Swarthmore College acknowledge its estate to be one of exceptional beauty and value, with the special advantage of lying within one of the best regulated boroughs of Pennsylvania.

SWARTHMORE COLLEGE was founded and is maintained by the Society of Friends. It offers its inmates the choice home atmosphere and close association of professor and student which are such effective influences in character-building. The chief aim at Swarthmore is to develop the individual student while maintaining the good of all. For the accomplishment of its aims, Swarthmore has been and continues to be the Ideal Small College.

The course of study is based on uniform requirements for admission. The work of the student is divided into three nearly equal parts: Prescribed, Elective, and Major. The prescribed work is limited to certain essential subjects of recognized value as a basis for general education; the elective work gives free play to individual tastes; the adoption of a major subject permits the students own inclination to be given special training and development by persistent study in one direction. Upon the completion of this undergraduate course the degree of B. A. is conferred; for the young men who desire to fit themselves to become engineers, a prescribed course leads to the degree of B. S. in Engineering.

In the fall of 1904, Swarthmore College opened a New Dormitory for the men and a New Chemical Building. Both these buildings are thoroughly modern and well equipped. Those who desire to enter should apply early.
